

HERE'S SOMETHING FOR THOSE WITH "CAN'T FIND TIME" HABIT

E. A. Lambourne's Candidacy in Herald Competition Is but One of Many Things Which Demand His Attention Every Day—Mrs. Barton's "Just Starting"—News of New Candidates and the Contest Generally.

It was only a short time ago that Ernest A. Lambourne, manager of the floral establishment bearing his name, manager of a musical organization and an athlete of the Salt Lake theatre, entered The Herald's competition with the announcement that he was in to win. If "ginger" helps any—and everyone who knows it is that "up and doing" spirit called ginger that brings success—Mr. Lambourne is a certain winner. He is just as enthusiastic now as he was at the start, more so, in fact. He is in line for a prize with 40,180 votes to his credit yesterday morning.

"Owing to the demands made upon my time by the show here and the numerous bookings at the theatre this week, I have not had as much time as I would have liked," he told The Herald interviewer yesterday afternoon. "But Monday morning will see me in as good shape to carry on the campaign as I was ten days ago. I certainly want to go on as well as I have in the past, and have every reason to believe I shall. No end of support has been assured me, and with what I have promised and in sight I feel cheerful over the outlook."

Ernest A. Lambourne, District D.

In addition to having the management of the floral establishment, Mr. Lambourne is prominent and active in the musical circles of this city. He manages a musical organization, also bearing his name.

Mrs. G. D. Barton of district B, and a big leader by the way, is delighted with the elegant Sterling piano she won as a special prize last month. "It is a beauty," she said yesterday afternoon. "It's worth more effort than it took to get it, but I'm not going to rest on my oars at this stage of the game. To tell the truth, I've just started."

BIG WOOL MEETING HELD

Representatives of Chicago Chamber of Commerce Are Here to Attend.

Over 100 Utah sheepmen will gather tomorrow in the Commercial club at 2 o'clock to hear three representatives of the National Wool Growers' association talk wool storage to the local wool growers. The advantages of the selection of Chicago as the natural wool center for a wool warehouse will be explained.

Representatives from the Chicago Chamber of Commerce arrived in this city last night and are now at the Hotel Knutsford. They are enthusiastic over the choice of the Windy City, and will tell of the promises made by the manufacturers to come there to buy wool, and the support offered by the Chicago business men.

There is said to be considerable dissension among the Utah sheepmen over the selection of Chicago.

The meeting promises to be a very lively one. The national representatives will go from here into Idaho, and thence to Wyoming, the great sheep center, and inquire into the industrial conditions in regard to the trade there.

NOBLE WORK OF ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL CHARITY ASSOCIATION DESERVES LIBERAL SUPPORT

The St. Mark's Hospital Charity association will give its annual ball one week from next Tuesday evening, Nov. 17.

Last year, at the very height of the financial panic, the people of Salt Lake attended this ball in large numbers and made generous contributions, thereby giving themselves and their friends a delightful evening, and furnishing more than $2,000 for the relief of the needy sick. This year the panic is over, the extensive preparations which are being made for the ball promise even a more enjoyable evening than last year, and the members of the society believe they will not be disappointed in their anticipation to receive at least $4,000 for their charity work. They are sure that if the people of Salt Lake could know how much suffering was avoided or relieved by means of this $2,000 last year, they would think it a privilege to give twice as much this year, that twice as much suffering might be relieved.

The women have continued their careful investigation of all cases reported to them, and when found worthy, the sick have been sent immediately to the hospital, where they have had good care at small cost and the free services of a physician. The generosity of the hospital and the physicians makes it possible for a large number of cases to be treated with a small amount of money. An average of about five patients a day was cared for last year at an expense of $2,000, only a little more than $1 a day for each patient.

Many pathetic stories of these patients, their suffering and their needs, could be told by the ladies who have charge of this investigation. There are maternity cases, where the overburdened mother of an already large family is saved and returned to her children. There are children, homeless and friendless, who are taken from the streets and the orphan asylums and given care that they need; and, perhaps, most pathetic of all, are the cases of those who are found struggling alone against poverty and sickness, and are unwilling to accept public charity. They can be helped quietly by this society as by a friend and, in some cases, they have gone out of the hospital with renewed health and courage and have paid back a part or all of the money expended for them.

Another class of patients are the working people who go to the hospital on their own responsibility with enough money saved from their wages for a brief illness or an operation. It is found that their complete recovery or their lives depend upon their staying longer than they expected, and this is reported by the superintendent of the hospital to the society, and the means are furnished for the treatment needed.

All this work of the society, as well as being a help to the individual, for whom it is primarily designed, has been a great help to the hospital in its efforts to do efficient charity work. The hospital has always taken charity patients whenever application has been made for them, and has thus run behind in its expenses several thousands yearly. This deficit had to be made up, before the existence of the hospital society, by appeals to eastern people for help. The help was often slow in coming, and thus the usefulness of the hos-

HIGH COURT HOLDS CITY LIABLE FOR CHILD'S DEATH IN CONDUIT

A decision of more than usual interest to the lay folk was rendered yesterday by the supreme court when it decided the appeal in the matter of Brown against the city of Salt Lake. The application of an old principle to a new situation is involved in the beginning. Lettie A. Brown, administratrix of the estate of an 8-year-old child, sued Salt Lake City for $10,000 damages for the death of the child, alleging that the city had been negligent. The case was tried and a verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for $1,500. The judgment was secured in Judge Lewis' court. The judgment of the lower court is affirmed.

The facts in the case are these: The child, with several others, found one of the bars broken of a cover protecting a conduit in the northwestern part of town. Through this they entered "playing ball." The little fellow was sentenced probably to "the dungeon," and he became separated from his companions and wandered to a point where a heavy stream of water poured into the conduit. The child was drowned.

In announcing its opinion the supreme court said:

"The doctrine underlying turn-table cases, that the making or leaving of a dangerous or attractive machine or other instrument or agency on one's premises under circumstances which naturally tend to attract or lure young children of immature judgment and to induce them to believe that they are at liberty to enter or handle or play with it is tantamount to an implied invitation to the child, and the corresponding duty is imposed on the owner of the premises to prevent the intrusion or to protect from personal injury such children as may be attracted to enter and thus induce those who are incapable of appreciating the attending danger."

Some there may be who do not recall the turntable days in Salt Lake. But, a long while ago there were discs upon which street cars were turned. These were level with the surface of the street, and the children used to have great fun spring about on them much like their physical damage. These turntables were provided with mechanism which, the rule was, should be in a position so that it would be impossible to move the table except by one who was in authority.

In its decision the supreme court refers to a case in Ogden wherein the line as to negligence, caution and care is drawn. In this case Albert Smalley, a boy, was playing about the railroad yards of the Rio Grande. He was warned by the watchman to keep away from the yards, but he came back and while playing among the tracks suffered injuries which resulted in the loss of a leg. The court remarks on the dissimilarity in the two cases, holding that in the one case, the Ogden matter, it was well known that danger existed and that trains were passing on and fro constantly and that warning had been given; whereas, in the case of the Salt Lake lad, he was left to his own devices and found the lure and followed it.

This decision will establish a precedent for all cases of like character hereafter coming before the courts of Utah.

The Remarkable Will of a Doctor

He Leaves the Secret of Life to His Children and the World.

One of the world's greatest physicians upon his death bed called his children about him and said: "When I die I will leave the secret of life as I have discovered it in my practice."

When they read his will it directed them to a safety vault which contained a large envelope marked thus: "The Secret of Life." Upon opening it they read: "Don't abuse the stomach." This profound thinker after a long life of medicine knew the stomach to be the throne of man.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will help you make a stomach healthy.

If it is worn out and lacks the fluids of digestion these tablets will take the place of such fluids. If it is filled with poisonous juices these tablets will neutralize and remove such poison. If you cannot eat without agony these tablets will show you how you can. If you will eat foolishly, or drink excessively, or if business demands abuse of stomach, these tablets after meals will make such abuse light, for they take the hard ship away from the stomach.

They are great digesters, filled with more powerful agents than the system can give. They go back into the blood after they have digested a meal, thereby increasing the ability of nature to take care of digestion without exhausting other organs.

High livers need feel no considerable hardship if they will eat one of these little tablets after a rich or late meal. It is a splendid gift to the stomach and a good habit to form. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets sell for 50c per package at every drug store.

ABOUT ADVERTISING—NO. 2

The Dollar That Can't Be Spent

By Herbert Kaufman

Every dollar spent in advertising is not only a seed dollar which grows a profit for the merchant but is actually retained by him even after he has paid it to the publisher.

Advertising creates a good will worth the cost of the publicity.

It actually costs nothing. While it uses funds it does not use them up. It helps the founder of a business to grow rich and at the same time keeps his business from not dying when he does.

It eliminates the personal equation. It perpetuates confidence in the store and makes it possible for a merchant to withdraw from business without having the profits of the business withdrawn from him. It changes a name to an institution—an institution that will survive after the death of its builder.

It is really an insurance policy which costs nothing—pays a premium each year instead of calling for one, and renders it possible to change the entire personnel of a business without disturbing its prosperity.

Advertising renders the business stronger than the man—-independent of his presence. It permanentizes systems of merchandising, the track of which is left for others to follow.

A business which is not advertised must rely upon the personality of its proprietor, and personality in business is a decreasing factor. The public does not want to know the man who owns the store—it isn't interested in him, but in his goods. When an unadvertised business is sold it is only worth as much as its stock of goods and fixtures. There is no good will to be paid for—it does not exist—it has not been created. The name over the door means nothing except to the limited stream of people from the immediate neighborhood, any of whom could tell you more about some store ten miles away which has regularly delivered its shop news to their breakfast tables.

It is as shortsighted for a man to build a business which dies with his death or ceases with his inaction as it is unfair for him not to provide for the continuance of its income to his family.

Grateful Words From One Who Knows

Came from Arizona to be cured.

Mesa, Ariz., Sept. 7, 1908.
Dr. Farnsworth, Salt Lake City:
Dear Friend—Just a few lines to let you know that we arrived home safely last Friday morning, also to let you know how thankful I am that I was fortunate enough to have my daughter, Carrie, under your skillful treatment, for I am satisfied that she will have no more of those dreadful attacks, for she has not shown the slightest symptoms of them. Everybody here remarks how well she looks, and she feels equally as well as she looks. Wishing you every success in business, yours respectfully,
M. G. SHILL.

The original from which the above was reprinted can be seen by anyone interested, and the names of many other beneficiaries of Dr. Farnsworth's wonderful treatment will be given as references of the wonders he has accomplished.

Troublesome Ailments Peculiar to Women

The Chiropractic Adjustments of Dr. Farnsworth Make Weak Women Strong.

If you are suffering of female trouble you probably know from experience that few medicines offer even momentary relief. Is it not reasonable, then, that the cause is remote from the effect, and therefore beyond the reach of medical or surgical aid?

Let Dr. Farnsworth examine you, a very modest and dignified procedure, for his methods do away with the distasteful local examination and treatments, being directed entirely toward the cause that rests in the nerve centers of the spinal column. Many women have been cured of the same ailment that is making you miserable. Why not investigate it now?

Fees for treatment are reasonable, yes insignificant, compared with the wonderful results attained.
